State Park Dismantles Memorial Honoring Local Resident and Founding Member of Friends of Fakahatchee

By Howard Lubel

Bill Mesce, "Vietnam Bill," a 28 year resident of Copeland, photographer naturalist, swamp tour guide and a founding member of the Friends of Fakahatchee passed away in April, 2016, after fighting cancer. Through his swamp walks and unforgettable rides on his Belgian troop carrier, Bill introduced thousands of people to the wonders of the Fakahatchee and always with a smile, a cigarette and a joke turned city dwellers into ardent protectors of the park. His contributions were so generous and appreciated that in 2014, the Friends of Fakahatchee honored him with their prestigious Mel Finn award.

To memorialize Bill's contributions to the Fakahatchee and to the Friends of Fakahatchee, Bill's friends raised funds to establish a picnic table and memorial sign at his favorite land place on the west main tram. This effort was undertaken after full consultation with and approval of the park manager at the time. Funds were solicited through the Friends of Fakahatchee, a picnic table was purchased and installed with park assistance and memorial signage compliant with park standards was erected by park staff at the end of 2017. For five years thereafter the site was maintained by park staff and volunteers and enjoyed as a place of respite and tranquility by park visitors.

Did You Know? By Donna Medina

In 1928 The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Depot opened in Everglades City. The station was in service from 1928-1956 moving freight and passengers. The depot was used in the movie Wind Across the Everglades staring Burl Ives and Gypsy Rose Lee and was home to several restaurants. Currently the depot is abandoned and history is slipping away.

There's a historical marker commemorating the depot but what would be better than saving the depot itself.

SAWFISH NEWS

by Tonya Wiley of Havenworth Coastal Conservation

Florida's Endangered Smalltooth Sawfish

A mature 14-foot smalltooth sawfish.

The population of smalltooth sawfish (Pristis pectinata) in the United States was once found in coastal waters from Texas to North Carolina. However, smalltooth sawfish populations declined dramatically during the second half of the 20th century due to the loss of important nursery habitat from coastal development and decades of mortality in both commercial and recreational fisheries. Smalltooth sawfish are now found mostly in Florida, and regularly found only in southwest Florida around Everglades National Park. In response to the dramatic reductions in both their numbers and range, NOAA Fisheries listed the U.S. population of smalltooth sawfish as an endangered species under the Endangered Species Act (ESA) in 2003.

The goal of the Endangered Species Act listing is to recover the population to the point that it no longer needs the protections of the ESA. After the listing NOAA Fisheries developed a plan to recover the U.S. smalltooth sawfish population. Published in 2009, the plan recommends specific steps to recover the population, focusing on (1) educating the public to minimize human interactions with sawfish and any associated injury and mortality, (2) protecting and/or restoring important sawfish habitats, and (3) ensuring sawfish abundance and distribution increase.

Newborn sawfish, like many other marine species, use specific habitats referred to as nurseries to protect small sawfish from predators and provide ample food for quick growth. Young sawfish often rely on shallow estuarine habitats fringed with red mangroves, but development has changed or destroyed much of this habitat which potentially affects in which areas sawfish can give birth and the juveniles can survive. Protecting these nurseries is vital to the recovery of the species so NOAA Fisheries designated two areas as Critical Habitat for juvenile sawfish in 2009: one in Charlotte Harbor and one in the Ten Thousand Islands/Everglades. It is important to note that the designation of an area as critical habitat does not create a closed area, marine protected area, refuge, or other conservation area. However, it ensures that federal agencies that undertake, fund, or permit activities that may affect these designated critical habitat areas are required to consult with NOAA Fisheries to ensure that their actions do not adversely modify or destroy the designated critical habitat.

If you see or catch a sawfish, note its estimated total length, and the date, time, and your location with GPS coordinates if available. Scientists use your sawfish encounter data to track recovery of the population, and steer research and conservation efforts. Please share the information by visiting www.SawfishRecovery.org, calling 1-844-4SAWFISH, emailing sawfish@myfwc.com, or entering the details in the FWC Reporter App.

For more information about current sawfish conservation and research in the United States visit www.SawfishRecovery.org or call 1-844-4SAWFISH.

Disease Threatening the Endangered Florida Panther

The FWC is investigating a disorder detected in some Florida panthers and bobcats. Affected animals exhibit varying degrees of rear leg weaknesses that lead to difficulty in walking. The FWC takes this situation seriously and is increasing monitoring efforts to locate affected animals via the deployment of video trail camera in areas where the condition has been most frequently documented. The FWC has termed this condition feline leukomyelopathy or FLM. A cause of FLM has not yet been determined.

What to do About Spousal Support During Illness By Rev. Bob Wallace

"Why did this have to happen to us?" is a question often asked by a healthy spouse when the other becomes stricken. The answer is, "Don't blame yourself!" The other is, "If only I had done such and such . . . things would be different!"

Don't make it worse on you, or your spouse, by blaming yourself. It will only cause a bad situation to get worse. Try to create a positive support role for yourself. Many times, a spouse sells their abilities short when caring for the sick. Just remember, you have known that person longer than your doctor or nurse, and you are very important in the care and recovery of your loved one. If you display a feeling of guilt, it won't help to bring healing. Always create a positive support role for yourself.

And don't forget your friends. Shutting yourself away from your friends is dangerous, unless you are in quarantine for COVID-19, or some other communicable disease. That's what phones and personal computers are for. Communication! Friends are an important part of therapy, not only for your spouse, but for you. Friends are interested and want to help, if you let them into your situation on a regular basis.

Keep your sense of humor! Remember the old saying, "Laughter is the best form of medicine!" Not only should you keep a dose of humor for yourself, but also for your spouse. Sometimes the only way you can keep from crying is to have a good laugh! And remember, recovering from an illness is just as stressful for your spouse as it is for you.

You may need to speak with your doctor about receiving professional help to overcome your own stress level. Nervousness, sleeplessness, excessive talking, hyperactivity, and overreaction to simple matters may be a sign you are stressed out and need some help. And even though you are taking care of someone else, take care of yourself! Because if you don't, who will? Become a partner in the healing process. And always have God in the partnership through prayer and confession. You always have support from Above, when you ask for it!

And when a friend or family member tells you they are worried about you, listen to them. Take their advice. You may not be aware that if you continue your current behavior and stress level, you too, may become sick. And with both of you down, that could become a very serious problem for you and your family.

So, don't be afraid of asking for help. Your doctor, your pastor, your friend, a family member, all can become your support group. Maybe it's when they are listening to what you say, and when you hear what you are saying, that the answer comes to you!

You don't have to be a rocket scientist to understand that the role of the spouse during illness is significant. Many times their recovery is keyed to how one spouse reacts to the other, because when the words "in sickness and in health" were said, they're to be taken seriously.

So, take some of these suggestions. Use them as a checklist. Then, when they are needed, both you and your spouse will benefit.

When the Tamiami Trail opened to automobile traffic in April of 1928, it spanned over 100 miles of desolate sawgrass prairie and swampland.

The Southwest Mounted Patrol was not only the precursor to the Collier County Sheriff's Department, but also predated the Florida Highway Patrol by more than 10 years. One-pot Baked Bean Bowl by Marya Repko

Ingrediants

Onion Chopped Carrot Chopped Green Pepper Chopped Little Red Tomatoes Baked Beans in Molasses Zucchini Chopped Olive Oil Paprika (Optional)

Pour a bit of olive oil to cover the bottom of the saucepan, sprinkle in some smoked paprika (optional), add chopped up onion, carrot, green pepper and a few little red tomatoes. Saute until onions are soft but not burnt. Add canned baked beans (in molasses). Simmer until bubbling, add zucchini, simmer until soft (about 5 minutes). Serve in a bowl.

In this chilly weather, I wanted "comfort food" so I made this easy recipe and enjoyed it with toasted French bread & butter. The quantities depend on how many you want to serve but, as a guideline, the onions should cover the bottom of the pot.

If you want a meat meal, start with chopped up bacon and/or sausage and cook until done before putting in the onions and other veggies.

Celebrating 100 Years of Community Service

February 25, 10:00 am - 1:00 pm Headquarters Library, 2385 Orange Blossom Drive Naples, Florida

This year, kids will get the chance to get up close to (and maybe even behind the wheel of) a fire truck, ambulance, police car, and different diggers. We will also have other fun vehicles like the Paws Around Town Naples Humane Society bus filled with furry friends, a CAT bus, the ZooMobile from the Naples Zoo, a food truck, and others with fun surprises inside! The program is geared towards families and will be lots of fun. We will also be hosting crafts and outreach tables with current community information. Organizations, including Collier County Museums, Parks and Recreation, the Naples Botanical Garden, and Domestic Animal Services, will be there to hand out goodies and information. Our event is sponsored by the Friends of the Library, and attendees can play games, get their face painted, and enjoy everything the Library offers.

Come and join in the fun and race to the Library!

For more information, contact the Collier County Public Library at (239) 252-7350 or visit us online at www.collierlibrary.org.
